Use stop-and-search powers

WITH knife crime, gun crime and extremism on the increase it is very important that stop-and-search continues if we are to take these crimes off our streets and housing estates and make our cities much safer for everyone.
Anyone genuine has nothing to fear from stop-and-search. We must all thank the police for the excellent job that they do on a daily basis. Albert Charles Bishop, Plumstead

● Helen Millichap, borough commander said: "I am grateful for Mr Bishop's comments and for acknowledging the importance of stop and search in keeping Royal Greenwich residents safe. If we know people carry knives, then it is our duty to prevent them hurting people, and stop-and-search is an effective way of doing that. Our focus is dealing with the crimes that cause Londoners most concern, including searches for weapons. We are committed to monitoring the use of this power and we must be able to demonstrate its fair and proportionate use to our communities. We do this through independent scrutiny including observing police use of the power by our monitoring group."

Put a stop to speeding quad-bikes

MANY residents of this borough are being tormented and their lives made a misery with the constant noise from motorbikes and quad-bikes speeding on busy roads, and on estates across the borough day and night. Why is nothing being done about it? Sadly one biker lost his life at Abbey Wood - but the issue continues. I have friends and other people telling me about this issue right across the borough.
Will there be another tragic episode before anything is done? Riding these bikes at such a great speed in built up areas is breaking the law so why are they allowed to do it? These bikers are being allowed to get their thrills and put lives at danger but nobody seems to care.

C Parker, Woolwich

● A spokesperson for the local police are aware of this issue which has been have been instructed to stop those riding in an anti-social manner and seize their vehicles where possible.

Walpole position

IN 1995 the Walpole Estate in Woolwich was earmarked for demolition.

A petition of tenants managed to not only save the housing estate but also gain a grant of £4.9 million to help refurbish kitchens, bathrooms, exteriors, and install CCTV.

Twenty years on and the Walpole Estate is still going, the 87 apartments mostly filled with families are now managed by a group of volunteers under the Walpole Estate Management Board made up of four concierge staff and one coordinator. The board manages a budget assigned by the council organising repairs and an almost round the clock concierge service. Residents who gathered for a celebration event on July 25 were joined by the mayor Cllr Norman Adams and other local councillors who enjoyed entertainment by community groups based on the estate and a display exploring its history.

Joan Sawamber, vice chair of the estate management board said: "We have almost non-existent anti-social behaviour with our zero tolerance approach. The efforts the board puts in for its residents are second to none, we pride ourselves in knowing all our residents and if they're a bit quiet we go over there and see how they're doing. We look after our residents closely, it's the little things that we do."

Give your views on Abbey Wood improvements

ABBEY Wood locals and commuters are invited to help shape important plans to improve a key local street in Abbey Wood as part of the wider regeneration of the area spurred on by Crossrail.

Improving Wilton Road is a joint regeneration project between the Royal Borough of Greenwich and the London Borough of Bexley, following a successful bid to the Mayor of London's High Street Fund.

The road is home to a number of local shops and businesses and has great potential to be even more of a hub for local people and commuters – which will also benefit the Wilton Road businesses.

Proposals for Wilton Road can be viewed at an exhibition on Wilton Road itself, and people are invited to comment on the plans and share their views and knowledge of the area.

Cllr Danny Thorpe, the royal borough's cabinet member for regeneration and transport said: "This is an exciting chance for local people – and people who regularly use Abbey Wood station – to directly shape plans for the Wilton Road area, which has even more potential to become a very popular local destination. These are really exciting times for Abbey Wood and it is wonderful to see the changes promised because of Crossrail really starting to come to fruition. As well as the Wilton Road scheme we're seeing the major new CrossQuarter development deliver new homes, new community facilities, nursery and supermarket and wider improvements to the whole area around the new station."

● The consultation tent will be near the entrance to Abbey Wood station, close to the Abbey Wood Arms pub forecourt, from 8am until 7pm this Friday August 7, Saturday, August 8 and Monday, August 10.
● Find out more about the Abbey Wood Crossrail Project by visiting www.crossrail.co.uk

Skills training prepares parents for job hunting

THE council and its children's centres are providing parents with training opportunities to help them develop vital skills and prepare them for job hunting – all whilst fulfilling childcare commitments.

The training, known as Functional Skills, specialises in helping parent learners improve their English, maths and IT. It's also designed to help participants become more confident and independent making it easier for them to get into a job, college course or training programme.

A recent event at the Woolwich Centre last Monday (July 27) saw the graduation of 50 parent learners. Cllr Sizwe James, the royal borough's cabinet member for business, employment and skills attended to offer congratulations and present certificates.

With this stage of training complete participants will now be able to progress to the next level, eventually gaining a qualification equivalent to a GCSE in maths and English.

Training is undertaken across 12 children's centres in the royal borough allowing parents to have the same access to training wherever they live. And a free crèche space takes care of childminding commitments so they can complete their course.

Alciona Popoviciu, who completed the recent training programme, said: "When I started here communication was an issue for me and some daily tasks were a challenge. The course has helped me understand the English language and British culture. The class was extraordinary and gave great context and emotional understanding to the English language.

"The course is great for parents with young children and it has helped me understand how my child learns at school and I have now been offered a teaching assistant role as a result of undertaking this class."

Olivia Maldonado from Woolwich also attended the classes. She told GT: "It is fantastic – I can do much of it online whilst looking after my children. It is really useful and helps me improve my skills and allows me to do a better job at helping my children."

Victoria Clandfield from Plumstead, added: "The training was a really good experience, I learnt a lot and they help you if you are struggling a bit. I was able to work on my maths and English – I'd certainly recommend it to other local parents."

Cllr James said: "Congratulations to the parents who worked hard to complete this training. The valuable skills they have developed will really aid them in the future and could lead to employment opportunities.

"The council is committed to helping parents develop their careers in this way going into the future. The fact that this training has been delivered through our children's centres is very positive – it means that courses are more accessible and it's therefore easier for parents with young children to undertake this valuable training."

Borough prepares to welcome 50 Tall Ships

MORE details have been released about the borough's next Tall Ships festival, due to take place in 2017.

The event will be held over four days, beginning Thursday, April 13, 2017, which is the Easter Bank Holiday weekend. A fleet of up to 50 Tall Ships is due to take part, starting from Royal Greenwich to which attracted more than a million visitors and gave a massive boost to the local economy. An independent report said it generated more than £17 million to the area, and was highly regarded by residents, visitors and businesses alike. It was London's first major Tall Ships Festival for 25 years, and created opportunities for local people in volunteering, sailing and surveyed said it made them likely to pay another visit to the borough.

The Greenwich Ship Tier close to the Cutty Sark has been booked for the 2017 event, and will be used to moor up to two larger tall ships. The Port of London Authority is working on a mooring plan for central Greenwich that will enable more ships to be put on temporary moorings along the Greenwich waterfront from the Old Royal Naval College to Deptford. It is also proposed to extend the festival site along the newly-developed Thames Path at Greenwich Reach to create a ships viewing area.

The council's cabinet was given an update on how plans were progressing, when members met on July 22. Cllr Miranda Williams, cabinet member for culture and creative industries, said: "The last Tall Ships Festival was truly thrilling, and put Royal Greenwich firmly on the map for the many thousands of visitors who came here. The 2017 event promises to be even better, and something that no local person should allow themselves to miss."

● Residents can book a cruise on a tall ship during the Greenwich Tall Ships Festival from August 27-31. There'll be entertainment, fireworks and daily trips and 15 tall ships will be on display. Full details at www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/tallships2015

The festival will build on the success of the 2014 Tall Ships Festival in the borough,

Blueprint for future sports facilities agreed

THE council has formally agreed a new strategy for sports facilities and playing pitches in the borough, both now and in the future.

The aim is to provide a clearer picture to ensure Royal Greenwich has excellent sports and activity facilities to meet the needs of a growing population. It will also help with decision-making about future projects.

Having a formal strategy in place is supported by Sport England. It will also put the council in a stronger position when it applies for funding help with new projects. These include the replacement for the Waterfront leisure centre in Woolwich, which is due to be built on the Wilkinson's site in General Gordon Square, and a multisport hub in Sutcliffe Park.

The strategy was agreed by the council's cabinet on July 22. Councillors said it would help identify and prioritise areas where sporting opportunities for residents could be enhanced as part of the legacy from the London 2012 Olympics and Paralympics.

The strategy will run until 2028, and by then it is expected that Royal Greenwich will be a place with high-quality facilities, playing pitches and activity programmes that meet the needs of everyone living, working or studying in the borough.

New supermarket creates 240 jobs for locals meat, fish and deli, hot food and pizza to go, as well as 350 customer parking spaces.

Sainsbury's recruited all 240 jobs locally, filling the posts with people who live within two miles of the store. The royal borough's jobs service, GLLaB helped support the recruitment by making sure royal borough residents registered with GLLaB were aware of the vacancies and were given help with their applications.

This week the store was due to announce the result of a public vote to choose the new store's local charity of the year. On the shortlist of local organisations is Trust Thamesmead, Archway Project, Greenwich and Bexley Hospice, and

Neutral Ground Child contact centre.

The new store manager, Glen Murphy, said: "The store is looking great and I know it will provide a fantastic shopping experience for customers in the area. We are looking forward to partnering up with one of the great local charities and becoming a real part of the community in Abbey Wood."

Royal borough council leader and Abbey Wood ward councillor Denise Hyland, said: "The opening of the new store is another milestone in the regeneration and transformation of Abbey Wood. Investment in Abbey Wood is bringing new jobs for local people and I wish everyone involved with the new Sainsbury's every success. This is a really exciting time for Abbey Wood and importantly, local people are benefitting directly from the changes, developments and new community facilities in the area, all being spurred on by Crossrail coming to the area."

● The opening of the Abbey Wood branch comes weeks after the opening of a Sainsbury's superstore in Gallions Road, Charlton, which created 135 jobs for local people. The supermarket giant worked with GLLaB to ensure that many of the new positions were filled by local people.

Mind your languages at summer school

by Ronnie Woods

CONTINENTAL culture was on the curriculum at a three-day summer school to help students improve their language skills.

The project was hosted at Eltham Hill School and funded by the GLA London Schools Excellence Fund. The free summer school for years six, seven, nine and 10 took place last month. Students took part in fun activities to help them explore French and Spanish culture covering sports, music, film and TV whilst improving their language skills, and encouraging them to speak more fluently and confidently in both languages.

Sofia Fischer, nine, who is Spanish and learning French said: "The summer school has been so much fun. It was hard at the beginning because I didn't know how to speak or write in French but it has helped me learn by listening more and writing out the words myself before I speak them."

Eltham Hill School principal Madeleine Griffin said: "Our French and Spanish Summer School is a prime example of the extensive opportunities we provide to help encourage our students to have fun whilst learning a new language to help them later in life."

Maggie Croxford, director of the Royal Greenwich Teaching School Alliance, which organised the summer school, said: "It involved children from across the borough and comes at the end of a 16-month project. We wanted to bring learning French and Spanish alive while allowing pupils to learn it at a much younger age. Introducing both cultures to them earlier helps improve their individual confidence as well."

Cllr John Fahy, deputy leader and cabinet member for children's services said: "This is a great way to check the progress of each student before they head off on their summer holidays as well as guide them in learning a new language that will benefit them later in life."

Wheels on the bus go round and round for children's centre summer roadshow

THE WHEELS on the Big Red Outreach Bus go round and round across West Greenwich this month.

To reach as many families as possible, managers of the area's five children's centres are taking their Big Red Outreach Bus to local neighbourhoods. They'll be setting up activities for children, parents and carers and families will be able to register and get information about the services on offer, as well as activities and events.

Five centres deliver services to local families from the Quaggy Children's Centre, Invicta Children's Centre, Robert Owen Children's Centre, Sherington Children's Centre and Rachel McMillan Nursery School and Children's Centre.

The bus roadshow is part of an outreach strategy, designed to engage with as many families as possible across the area's reach. Staff from all centres are involved and working to improve teamwork and partnership projects.

Tim Neville, leader of Greenwich West's Children's Centre and Quaggy Development Trust said: "We know that there can be many reasons why families may not attend our centres, not least because of isolation and simply not knowing about what is on offer. We have therefore decided that we are taking our children's centres to them. It will be a pop-up children's centre service where we will be able to reach families that may otherwise not engage with us. There will be a variety of early years play activities available including advice and information."

The bus stops at Robert Owen Children's Centre today (August 4) calling at the following centres and dates: Aug 6 – Rachel MacMillan; Aug 7 Invicta; Aug 10 Sherington; Aug 11 Robert Owen; Aug 17 Sherington; Aug 19 Rachel McMillan (am) Robert Owen (pm); Aug 20 Quaggy.

Free courses at summer uni

OVER 650 young people who live, work or study in the borough have signed up for courses at a summer university where they can learn new skills and have fun.

There are hundreds of places on Futureversity courses for young people aged 10-19 (or up to 25 for those with disabilities). It's all part of the royal borough's Stride into Summer programme which offers young people a chance to discover new skills, make new friends and unlock new talents by trying their hand at the many learning and activity-based courses. Courses are categorised into Arts & Fashion, Business & Careers, Digital Media & Film, Music & Performing Arts, Skills for Life and Sports, Fitness & Wellbeing. The programme, now in its fourth year, is funded by the royal borough and run by the London-based youth charity, Futureversity, which set up courses in partnership with businesses and industry professionals, as well as local arts and community groups. Activities take place throughout July and August with the aim of giving young people something purposeful to do during the long summer break.

Sam Obembe, aged 18, from Thamesmead, said: "My mum signed me up for these summer courses - but when I read the leaflet I didn't mind. I think it's a really good idea. I am happy to get new experiences and challenges and if it involves serious learning I am up for that. I want to do mechanical engineering and become a chartered engineer." Futureversity's chief executive Michele McKendry said: "The royal borough's 'Stride Into Summer' initiative run by Futureversity, offers a range of fun courses that offer really useful skills to young people in the borough. I'm overjoyed by the overwhelming response from young people and their parents to this summer's programme there are just a few spaces left so it's not too late to grab a place, but hurry up and apply!" Cllr John Fahy, the borough's cabinet member for children's services, said: "The royal borough is proud to be funding another exciting summer programme for young people. All activities provide a great opportunity for young people to learn new skills, develop confidence and express their creative talents. I would encourage young people to take a look through the programme and sign up. There really is something for everyone." Most courses are now full, but there are spaces on the following courses: Dramatic Moves & Musical Movements (SEN), Jewellery and Bead Making, Acting for stage & screen, Summer Hip Hop & Creative Choreography and Careers in Science and Health.

● Any young person living in the borough can sign up online at www.futureversity.org/greenwich

It's easier online

More services are being added to the royal borough's website making it even easier for residents to access information and pay bills online.

From this week residents can now report noise pollution or noise issues and use a search tool to check if a local street is in a controlled parking zone.

Other round-the-clock online services available to residents include the ordering and buying compostable waste sacks, online applications for resident parking permit renewals and quick and easy reporting of street or pavement problems.

Local firms are also benefiting from being able to do business with the council online, with skip and scaffolding licences, planning applications and parking permit renewals just some of the new services available to buy on the council's website.

It is clear that residents are happy with the increased services provided by the royal borough's website. Since October 2014, over 11,500 local residents have got online to order and pay for bundles of compostable waste sacks.

And in a sign that local people want to order services from the council at a time most suitable for them, 46 per cent of parking permit holders using the online renewal form are choosing to renew their passes at weekends and in the evening, when the council's offices are closed.

Cllr Maureen O' Mara, cabinet member for customer services said: "Our website is going from strength to strength and more services than ever are now available online for the convenience of local people. The council is committed to ensuring that services are as accessible as possible. I'm pleased to see that more and more residents are utilising the website as a place to get assistance, pay bills, complete forms and do much more.

Into work support for people with autistic spectrum disorder

EMPLOYERS who provide opportunities for work and training for people with autism will get support and advice from the royal borough.

It's all part of a council campaign to encourage employers to consider people with autism who want to work.

The National Autistic Society says only 15% of people with autism are in full time employment, despite 79% of people with autism on out of work benefits wishing to work.

The society says people with autism often possess a variety of exceptional skills - from technical expertise to detailed factual knowledge and high levels of concentration - giving them the ability to thrive in a number of roles.

It stresses that people with autism may have difficulties with social skills, while a lack of understanding by others makes it difficult for them to gain employment.

The royal borough's support to employers recognises that people with autism can experience problems with communication, social interaction, and changes in routine and is designed to offer simple support in the workplace. Help will be given to autistic people engaged in the scheme through services aimed at developing their confidence and skills for work.

Cllr David Gardner, the royal borough's cabinet member for health and adult social care, said: "People with autistic spectrum conditions are capable of doing any job just as well as - if not sometimes better than - other people in the community.

"Indeed, people with autism may have some very valuable skills that can be applied in the workplace but may need support in some areas. Employers who offer work or training to people with autism stand to open up new possibilities for their organisation, and for people with disabilities. I would urge local employers to get in contact to find out more about Greenwich's pilot scheme, and of the difference that it could make for your organisation."

Pool paddlers reminder

Parents who take their young children to paddling pools in the royal borough's parks are reminded that they need to ensure that swim nappies are used for children who are not toilet trained. This will avoid incidents that cause the paddling pools to be closed for hygiene reasons and allow people to enjoy them in the warm summer weather.

Young people renovate playground for Duke of Edinburgh Award

YOUNG people got out their paintbrushes to give a new look to a popular adventure playground.

Fourteen young people helped to renovate the Plumstead Adventure Playground as part of their volunteering project for the Duke of Edinburgh award. And they welcomed the deputy mayor Cllr Olu Babatola to see their handiwork at a celebration event on July 23.

The Duke of Edinburgh programme is for young people aged 14-24 that live, study or attend youth services in the royal borough. The national programme led in the borough by the Charlton Athletic Community Trust features a wide range of activities leading to an award that's recognised by universities and employers alike.

The teens spent more than 26 hours working at the Blendon Terrace playground which is managed by GLL, attracts 1,300 visitors a week and is open after school and on weekends.

The youngsters conducted consultations with young people before the decoration work.

Remi Torrens, a Duke of Edinburgh volunteer, said: "We all decided that it would be nice to redecorate the playground because a lot of children come here. Now, the colours we've painted will definitely help to make the area more friendly."

Fellow volunteer Mashood Azeez, said: "It makes you feel more involved with the community, you're making a difference to other people and getting in touch with your close friends as well as people you don't know. It's opened my eyes to see the things that need improving in our community and hopefully our playground is the first of many renovations to the area."

Cllr Olu Babatola, deputy mayor of Greenwich said: "These young people have worked really hard and to get to this stage is brilliant. Our children are getting to the point now where they don't ask what their community will do for them but what are they going to do to support their community. I think it's very inspirational and is a good example for the younger ones to follow."

Perfect anniversary present for Heritage Trust

THE Royal Greenwich Heritage Trust (RGHT) has received its first major grant as it celebrates its one-year anniversary as an independent charity. The money will be used for Charlton House – to fund a detailed survey into what kinds of repairs the much-loved historic building needs.

The Trust was set up in July 2014 to protect and maintain historic buildings in the borough - including Charlton House and Greenwich Heritage Centre.

The grant of £35,000 has come from the World Monuments Fund Britain (WMFB), supported by the Mellon Endowment Fund and means this important work can now be carried out at Charlton House.

Len Duvall, chair of the Royal Greenwich Heritage Trust, said: "We are delighted to receive this grant on behalf of the trust.

"This funding will ensure that we can move on to the next exciting phase and will provide us with a better understanding of what repairs are needed."

Clinic reopens after £2m cash injection

A £2 MILLION investment has seen major improvements to a vital service offering free contraception, sexual health screening and treatment as well as information and advice.

The Contraception and Sexual Health clinic, known as CASH, moved back to Market Street in Woolwich last week after a facelift to the building and to facilities.

The centre offers walk-in and appointment clinics, advice and information on all methods of contraception, screening, pregnancy tests and treatment for sexually transmitted infections. It also runs separate clinics for young people and adults.

The Oxleas NHS Foundation Trust funded the one-year refurbishment, which has seen the 1930s building become fully accessible, with a new reception area, and new clinical facilities, treatment and triage rooms. Patients visiting the clinic will have an improved experience with iPads utilised to offer instant feedback.

Fiona Dickson Head of CASH said: "We're very excited and looking forward to returning to Market Street Health Centre. We're also pleased to offer patients increased opening hours to include a Saturday morning session, run in the same way as other sessions – people just walk-in; they don't need to make an appointment."

● CASH runs a walk-in service on: Monday 1pm - 7pm; Tuesday 10am - 3pm; Wednesday 11am - 4pm; Thursday 1pm - 7pm; Friday 10am - 3pm, Saturday 10am - noon; Sunday Closed.

ROYAL borough of

THE royal borough's amazing parks and green spaces are in the news again for achieving national recognition for high standards and excellent management. DAN STEPHENS finds out more about the area's many beautiful parks and open spaces and how the council works in partnership with the many parks friends groups to help sustain and improve local green spaces...

Pa

Flying the green flag

A DOZEN of the royal borough's beautiful parks have been recognised as some of the best in country after being awarded with Green Flag status. The national award, reserved for only the best parks and green spaces, highlights the excellent facilities and highest possible standards that so many of the royal borough's parks adhere to.

The royal borough's 12 award winning parks and open spaces come in all shapes and sizes, and each has unique local features that have proved popular to visitors throughout the years. Every park was independently given Green Flag status after it was inspected and scored on its attractiveness, cleanliness and local involvement, as well as heritage and sustainability. The Green Flag Awards Scheme is run by the environmental charity Keep Britain Tidy.

Cllr Jackie Smith, cabinet member for community safety and environment said: "Providing inspirational and enjoyable green spaces for the whole community to enjoy is such an important part of making the royal borough a great place to live and to visit. The success of these Green Flag awards marks the years of experience and hard work of our highly skilled teams who ensure that our parks stay looking attractive and welcoming.

"It also reflects the huge community involvement of our Friends of Parks Groups and other local volunteers who dedicate their time to ensure our parks and open spaces continue to be well-used integral parts of their local communities. The good news of our Green Flag status comes as we start the summer holidays, so provides an excellent excuse for people to discover the huge variety and activities that our much loved parks have to offer."

Become a friend

THE royal borough benefits from the hard work of residents and local communities who play an active role in running their local parks through Friends' groups. Anyone who wants to become involved is encouraged to join their local Friends of Parks group or speak to the council about establishing a new group for a park which does not already have one. One of the advantages of creating a Friends group is that some available funding bids for local groups are not open to councils to apply for directly.

Ecology park update

The Greenwich Peninsula Ecology Park, another local open space, is making excellent progress with a fundraising campaign to build a new outdoor classroom and increase learning opportunities.

Thanks to local residents, volunteers, businesses and investors the campaign is well on the way to raising the target £60,000. The appeal has now been running for seven months, and is part of a wider project to raise over £150,000 for a new building, infrastructure and additional staffing to provide education to children and adults.

Joanne Smith, senior warden at the Ecology Park said, "We are so grateful to all the support we have received so far. The Friends group, local residents and businesses have been really generous with their time and money and this has helped us raise three times as much as we would normally raise in a year! A big thank you to everyone for helping us get closer to our goal and make a bigger difference!"

Festival fun

THIS summer many of the royal borough's green spaces have played host to music, dance, sports, entertainment and social events for the whole community as part of the annual PARKSfest celebrations. The two-month programme of events, part of the Royal Greenwich Festivals, was put on by the council and Friends of Parks groups and saw thousands of visitors of all ages experience fun-filled days out in their local parks.

Terry Powley, chair of the Greenwich Parks Forum said: "The seventh year of PARKSfest carried on the successful and flourishing tradition of live entertainment in the royal borough's parks and pleasaunces. Fifteen lively events in open air venues, a host of talented performers and appreciative audiences from the local community were all brought together by the Greenwich Parks Forum and enthusiastic volunteers from 10 Friends of Parks groups."

If you go down to Bostall Woods

ONE community group making a positive difference to the local area is the Friends of Bostall Heath and Bostall Woods.

Dedicated volunteers work in a number of ways to manage and improve the area, which is used seven days a week by the public for dog walking and various sports. The Friends meet once a month to discuss progress and plan projects. Some members also spend time maintaining the area's pathways every Thursday. The group also regularly repairs and paints the benches and seating in and around the woods. Last year they cleaned and redecorated the public toilet block and tended to the gardens in the surrounding area.

Future projects include the clearing of a huge patch of brambles growing on the lower picnic area and the planting of more native trees. There are also plans to adapt the pathways for disabled people to be able to enjoy woodland walks.

WAVE HELLO: a selection of the fans on show, main picture, visitors admire a display

Located in the heart of historic Greenwich, the Fan Museum occupies two handsome Grade II listed Georgian townhouses – lovingly restored internally and externally. It's the only museum in the UK devoted in its entirety to the history of fans and the ancient craft of fan making.

The museum houses more than 5,000 objects (not all on show at any one time) including works by Salvador Dali, Paul Gauguin and Walter Sickert.

The museum opened 20 years ago and ever since has strived to foster a positive connection and increase engagement with the local community and the forthcoming open day provides an opportunity for all sections of the community – particularly those who have yet to visit – to get a taste of one of the UK's most unique cultural institutions.

On the day, free admission to all local residents will include entry for Royal Greenwich and Lewisham borough residents, tours and talks throughout the day, fan-making demonstrations, activity trails for children and refreshments in the Orangery with a sampling of their popular Afternoon Tea.

Jacob Moss, curator of The Fan Museum said: "Our forthcoming open day offers residents of both Greenwich and Lewisham boroughs an opportunity to visit the museum and learn something of the history of fans and craft of fan making – all free of charge! There will be all sorts of activities to enjoy: from fan making demonstrations to activity trails for children, we'll be pulling out all the stops to provide an entertaining and educational experience."

Local residents are required to present identification with their current address for FREE entry (e.g. Driving Licence, utility bill etc.) For further information contact, visit their website at www.thefanmuseum.org.uk

Alternative routes for traffic affected by the closure of Bexley Road would be via Southend Crescent, Footscray Road, Avery Hill Road and Bexley Road and vice versa. The alternative route for traffic affected by the closure of Greenvale Road would be via local roads.
4. The Order would come into force on 17th August 2015 and would continue in force for up to 18 months, or until the works have been completed, whichever is the sooner, however the works are expected to take four days to complete.
5. If any person wishes to question the validity of the Order or of any of the provisions contained therein on the grounds that they are not within the powers conferred by the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, or that any requirement of that Act or of any instrument made under that Act has not been complied with, that person may, within six weeks from the date on which the Order was made, apply for that purpose to the High Court.

BIDDING FOR PROPERTIES

People on the Housing register are able to bid for all properties, regardless of their banding. You must be eligible for the size of property and bids will be considered in the following order:

First Band A, followed by Band B both in priority date order. Those in Band C will then be considered in registration date order.

Please note that there will still be some properties with age restrictions so only people of this age group can apply for these.

- A is for applicants in unsatisfactory housing, including people moving due to demolition and those underoccupying their homes.
- B is for applicants the Royal Borough of Greenwich must prioritise according to the law, particularly homeless people, and others with an urgent need to move for medical or welfare reasons.
- C is for all applicants on the housing register, including those that are in priority bands A and B.

How do I apply?

Get on the list

First, you've got to be on the housing waiting list to join the scheme. If you're not, register an application on line at www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk

Find your applicant number

It will be on the letter you've already had from the Royal Borough of Greenwich about the new scheme. You'll need that number and the reference number of the property you're after, which will be on the advert.

Pick out your ideal property

by looking in Greenwich Time or regularly checking the website:

www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/homes

Click on your preference on the website. If you don't have a computer, you can always use one for free at either The Eltham or Woolwich Centre or a local library.

Apply in one of three ways

- Text bidding is now available and the number to use is 07786207913. For further information please see page 2, or

The free display, runs until August 16 at the Greenwich Gallery, Peyton Place, off Royal Hill. Mon-Fri 9.30am-5.30pm and 1-5pm Sat/Sun. Visit www.thegreenwichgallery.com or call 020 8465 5965.

hosting weekly support sessions to help participants get in shape. The sessions include bouts of running and walking to help runners build up their stamina so they can get to the point where they can run for 30 minutes.

Training sessions are £1 and take place on Mondays at the Waterside Children's Centre, Southwood Road, from 1.30-2.30pm and at Sporting Club Thamesmead, Bayliss Avenue, on Thursdays from 6-7pm.

Now's the Time is a three-year partnership project between Trust Thamesmead, Gallions, Peabody, Bexley, the Royal Borough of Greenwich and Sport England, supported by Charlton Athletic Community Trust. Its aim is to encourage residents to have fun and get more active.

Now's The Time community sport activator Stephanie Turner said: "The event is the first of its kind in Thamesmead and is the perfect chance for residents to enjoy getting active with other members of the community whilst raising money for a worthy, local charity."

Cllr Miranda Williams, the royal borough's cabinet member for culture and creative Industries, said: "Many first-time runners get inspired to take part through a desire to raise money for charity, and the Bexley and Greenwich Community Hospice is a cause that is very close to the hearts of local people. With weekly training sessions offered by Now's The Time, this is a great opportunity for Thamesmead residents to set themselves a target for their running and for their fundraising."
